

3.0 Retail

background

- > Possible kinds of retail:
 - > ancillary retail, generally required for any entertainment uses ie Medieval Times, Ricoh Coliseum
 - > large "format" retail (ie Home Depot);
 - > destination/specialty retail (eg antique fair, craft fair, bazaar, flea market);
- > The image of Exhibition Place as a provider of "retail" opportunities has traditionally been event-based (ie Home Show). Most retail activities are exhibitor-based for a specific event, or are ancillary to that event (ie CHIN Picnic). Exhibitors are only open during the event, and types of retail change from event to event;
- > Exhibition Place is viewed as a venue for large and significant events/shows which may see a more permanent commercial operation as competing against them for exhibitors, space, parking and customers;
- > The location at Exhibition Place is still considered somewhat separated from the surrounding city context;
- > Waterfront Secondary Plan (OPA 257) has prohibition against "big box" retail -

"(P43) Large scale, stand-alone retail stores and/or "power centres" are not part of the vision for the Central Waterfront. New retail development will only be considered within the context of the City's urban planning principles and must be supportive of the other core principles and policies of this Plan. Retail and other uses which require large areas of unscreened surface parking will not be permitted";
- > CNE has largest retail marketplace of any Canadian fair with $2.0 million gross revenues.

- > Ancillary retail:
 - > provides additional income to the Board as percentage of tenant gross revenues;
- > Large format retail:
 - > possible revenue generation, but must balance the revenue generation of such permanent retail with the effect on consumer shows;
- > Destination/specialty retail:
 - > travelling "retail" uses as an event is a revenue opportunity (warehouse sales, travelling antique market);
 - > permanent destination/specialty retail has possible revenue generation but must be balanced against loss of temporary show space and negative effect on shows.

challenges

- > Ancillary retail:
 - > is generally required for any entertainment uses (Medieval Times, Ricoh Coliseum, QE Theatre);
- > Large format retail:
 - > contradicts Secondary Waterfront plan;
 - > threat to consumer show business;
 - > threat to attracting future consumer shows;
 - > displaces present exhibitor-based retail which cannot be relocated to other buildings - potential loss of gross profit in QE Hall of $815,000 (rent, services, parking net of cost);
 - > Incompatibility with key events at Exhibition Place (eg CNE, Agricultural Fair, Molson Indy);
- > Destination/specialty retail:
 - > threat to attracting current consumer show business;
 - > threat to attracting future consumer show business;
 - > price differential likely to be offered by destination retail operator for a permanent booth would be huge and compete with shows' ability to attract temporary exhibitors - ie 10x10 exhibitor booth at a typical show would cost the same for 5 days as it would for a whole year in a bazaar or flea market.

(which do not need to be relocated) can comfortably co-exist, without negatively impacting their operation. A relocation strategy will be developed to accommodate appropriate city-serving businesses that need to be close to the downtown as well as other businesses that are dependent on water/rail access.

(P43) Large scale, stand-alone retail stores and/or "power centres" are not part of the vision for the Central Waterfront. New retail development will only be considered within the context of the City's urban planning principles and must be supportive of the other core principles and policies of this Plan. Retail and other uses which require large areas of unscreened surface parking will not be permitted.

(P44) Companies that rely on lake access for their operations will remain important maritime industries on the waterfront to the extent that they can be accommodated within emerging communities.

CREATING SPECIAL PLACES TO VISIT, RELAX, PLAY AND LEARN

(P45) The Central Waterfront will become the face of Toronto to the world, with a quality of experience and environment comparable to that of other international cities, a place to express the future of the city with confidence and imagination.

(P46) Strategies to attract high-value tourism to the Central Waterfront will receive top priority in order to strengthen Toronto's role as the cultural capital of the nation. The Central Waterfront will be the future location of major international-calibre cultural, entertainment and other tourist attractions.

(P47) A wide variety of year-round experiences for visitors will be offered. Emphasis will be placed on developing new facilities that are enduring, creative and unique to Toronto and its waterfront. Winter conditions will be an important consideration in developing the Central Waterfront's tourism infrastructure.

(P48) Boating opportunities will be expanded to draw city residents, workers and tourists to the waterfront. The Central Waterfront offers an opportunity to provide internationally acclaimed boating facilities, particularly in the Outer Harbour. The design, location and viability of such facilities will be developed further in the Precinct Implementation Strategies, in consultation with the appropriate stakeholders.

(P49) Toronto's story will be told by preserving the waterfront's cultural and natural heritage in the development of new private and public spaces, some of which are designated as the Inner Harbour Special Places.

(P50) Heritage properties listed on the City's Inventory of Heritage Property will be protected and improved where feasible. Designated heritage buildings will be conserved for creative reuse in their original locations.

SECTION TWO: MAKING IT HAPPEN

1) A SIMPLIFIED APPROACH TO LAND USE REGULATION

The Central Waterfront will have three types of land use designations (Map E):

- Parks and Open Space Areas are areas for use as parks, open spaces, natural areas and plazas, and can include compatible community, recreation, cultural, restaurant and entertainment facilities. Lands designated Parks and Open Space Areas in the vicinity of Regeneration Areas may be subject to Precinct Implementation Strategies.
- Regeneration Areas are blocks of land that may be subdivided into smaller areas for a wide variety of mixed-use development ranging from industries to housing to community services and parks; from offices to stores to hotels and restaurants. Regeneration Areas will generally be subject to Precinct Implementation Strategies. The water's edge development sites located adjacent to the water's edge promenade and along the urban dockwall will be subject to the highest quality of design excellence. Development within water's
